Free workshop on March 23 there to explain NDIS to Ipswich families and clients

AEIOU Foundation there to help

IPSWICH families with a child with autism will have access to a great free NDIS workshop series that will be hosted by AEIOU Foundation, to help achieve successful outcomes for their family.

In preparation for the region's transition to the scheme on 1 July 2017, AEIOU Camira Centre Manager Louise Nasternak said the workshops were designed to educate families and ensure positive results for children, parents and carers.

"The first of the four workshops targets families of children with autism who are interested in learning more about the NDIS and how it will affect them," she said.

"We are already well-versed in the scheme and know how it can best support families to achieve their goals and all their priorities."

Ms Nasternak said that the AEIOU was one of Australia's leading providers of autism-specific early intervention.

"Our intensive evidence-based program is delivered in a fun and friendly environment by what is a qualified transdisciplinary therapy team," she said.

"We use evidence-based practices and there is also a big focus is developing communication skills, while reducing challenging behaviours, which may be a barrier to social and educational opportunities."

The first workshops will be held on Thursday 23 March from 7pm at AEIOU Camira.

For any more information, please make sure that you take time to visit the website aeiou.org.au/workshops or telephone 3381 8767 to RSVP.
