Cycling sisterhood champions children's charities

On Sunday, a tight-knit peloton of 45 women will ride into Brisbane at the end of an epic three-day ride for Chain Reaction Challenge, which has raised $25 million for children's charities, including AEIOU Foundation, over the past decade.

The Women's 300 ride will have taken the cyclists on a 300+km loop through Queensland's beautiful Sunshine Coast and hinterland, including Noosa and the Glasshouse Mountains.

Each participant has contributed to this year's enormous fundraising effort and worked tirelessly and passionately to promote the cause at both a grassroots level and through their high-level corporate contacts.

During the ride, the women will have benefited from the opportunity to cultivate relationships with other professionals, while gaining a sense of achievement for completing a fun, but challenging course, and raising much-needed funds.

Team members include former Australian Road Race and Time Trial champion and 2018 Commonwealth Games Time Trial Gold Medallist Katrin Garfoot and former Australian cricketer Kirsten Pike.

Chair of the event organising committee, Patrice Sherrie, who is also Director of a professional accounting and advisory firm, had the vision of providing a unique and empowering networking opportunity for the female cyclists in Brisbane's business community.

"I wanted to be sure that the influential female executives I knew had an avenue not only to share their love of cycling and support for charitable organisations, but to encourage other women to network in an environment that was fun rather than intimidating," she said.

This year's major charity partner, AEIOU Foundation, provides evidence-based early intervention for children with autism aged 2 – 6 years. Through AEIOU, children are given the best opportunities to gain essential life skills to establish independence, confidence and readiness for school.

Media are invited to photograph/ video and interview the riders as they cross the finish line and celebrate with their families.
